

Family Medicine* is looking for a new Deputy Editor

The Deputy Editor advises the Editor in Chief on the future of the journal's editorial strategy and provides input on specific papers, commentaries, and topics for theme issues.

The Deputy Editor's role includes:

- Participation in weekly meetings of the editorial team
- Taking a leadership role in a broad range of journal activities (i.e. editorial board meetings, decisions about theme issues, etc.)
- Contribution to the supervision of the STFM Medical Editing Fellow
- Writing 2-3 editorials a year
- Solicitation of commentaries or special articles on topics agreed upon with the Editor in Chief and editorial team.
- Serving as an editor for select papers and/or theme issues.
- Attending one in-person and one virtual Editorial Board meeting
- Assisting the Editor in Chief with selection of new members of the editorial team and the editorial board
- Promoting journal content through social media or alternative publishing venues (blogs, podcasts, etc.)

Time: This position will average 3-5 hours per week.

Stipend: There is a stipend offered for the position.

The editorial team is looking for senior family medicine faculty with extensive writing and editing experience at Family Medicine or other journals in the field.

Send CV and a letter describing why you are interested in this position to tbrazelton@stfm.org by March 30, 2024.
